

Graser Erfolg

Beitrag von „Stachelbär“ vom 16. Februar 2024, 20:20

Hello!

I do have a Trichocereus huascha in my collection from Golling and when I got it the owner said that it is not possible to cross with it as a mother because it allways brings a fruit.

Plants like these are called selbstvertil in German.

My translator says in English it is called self-serving.

In the next year I have seperated the plant bevore the first flower opened and it was not possible that pollon from other plants reached it. It has made a fruit.

Next time I have cut the flower bevore it opened and it also made a fruit.

To stay by the topic: I am in contact with the owner of the Gräsers Erfolg x SB and I will inform you in the next days what I could find out about it.

Bye,

Walter
