

Sunburn damage on Echinopsis.

[quote = hans georg , 5292] Hello ,

I normally use green shade net sun in spring , when sun becomes stronger , until the plants are accustomed to the. I completely remove the net latest mid of may . Even during the heat wave currently they get full sun , and water every 3 days. So far I did not find any sunburn yet.

But I think it depends also on the material of the panes . Acrylic double glass scatters light more than normal glass, which is a benefit , and so watering has an influence.

Cheers👋

Hello Hans-Georg,

Thank you for your input.

It is very interesting to hear about your conditions.

I think your Acrylic double glass allows you to grow without too many sun burn worries. You can solve it with your spring care.

I have ordinary horticultural glass in aluminium greenhouse and think this is why I am having problems. Also my plants are subject to an intense window of sunhine during the middle of the day which is perhaps a shock for them!

With regards
